For me, the most precious gift is my school uniform. It was given to me by my parents and it symbolises many great things in my life.

The uniform is a sign of trust from my parents. They believe that my school can nurture me into a fine young man. With the true friends and kind teachers there, what else do I need to frame myself into the person that my parents have hoped for?

The uniform is a symbol of where I belong—Kowloon Technical School. There, I can develop my intellectual powers as well as aesthetic skills. While there are robot programming classes, I can also join activities like diving and volleyball. Hence, I can unleash my potentials to the full to face my blooming future.

My school uniform is the most precious gift for me as it reminds me of what makes me whole. What else can I ask for?
